Mr. S. Frederick Nixon having received a majority of all the votes cast, the Clerk declared him duly elected Speaker of the Assembly for 1902, and appointed Messrs. Allds and Palmer a committee to conduct the Speaker elect to the Chair.

Mr. Speaker, on taking the Chair, addressed the House as follows:

Gentlemen of the Assembly.—I thank you most sincerely for your kind partiality in electing me to preside over your deliberations. I assure you that the compliment is not valued less because of its repetition. On the contrary the honor is more than ever prized because it indicates satisfaction with my previous service. This year an added distinction goes with your preferment, since in the history of our State a fourth consecutive term has not been conferred heretofore upon any Speaker of the Assembly, among all the able and famous men who have graced this chair. I feel that this distinction imposes additional obligations upon me to give the closest attention to my official duties, and to treat every member so fairly and courteously that you will not regret the innovation. We meet on the first day of the second year of the twentieth century, with bright prospects for our glorious State and Nation. The year just passed was marvelous in its prosperity, the greatest in the history of our nation, but the memory of it will ever be shrouded with the sad recollection of the assassination of President McKinley. Other Presidents have as honored position in our national history, but all, not excepting Washington, had enemies and detractors in their lifetime. William McKinley had none. By political opponents as well as supporters he was alike honored and beloved for his pure patriotism, his ability, and his charming personality. That the hand of an assassin could be raised against such a man has convinced the nation that all who avow the creed of anarchy should be summarily dealt with. The National Congress, on the recommendation of President Roosevelt, is earnestly considering the problem of how to remove this peril encompassing our rulers, and will no doubt enact efficient laws upon the subject. A State law, providing special punishment for any attempt upon the life of the Governor, might well be enacted.

It is a pleasure to see so many familiar faces in this body, for it means a sufficient proportion of experienced legislators to insure rapid and efficient work, while the judgment and counsel of new members fresh from the people will be none the less valued.

I also note that the majority of the dominant political party in this body is even larger than it was last year. I do not regard this result as a criticism of the acts of the excellent gentlemen who constituted the minority last year, but rather it means the approval by the people of the measures passed by the majority, whereby the State tax was reduced to the lowest rate of any year since 1854. It shows that the people appreciate wise legislation and economy in public affairs, enforced by the harmonious action of the legislative and executive departments of our State government. There is still work to be done in that direction, and the people have virtually said to us: "Well done. Go forward."

I have long held to the belief that the ordinary work of our annual legislative session might and should be completed within three months. This might be the shortest session in the history of our State, and it can be made so if you will introduce your local bills early and attend to their progress through committees and upon the calendar of the two houses. It is a misfortune that so many bills are introduced. In the last Assembly there were 1,701, in the Senate 1,057. Of these 1,235 passed the Assembly and 1,084 passed the Senate. The chapters of laws enacted number 734. Of all those 2,758 bills introduced in the Assembly and Senate practically three-fourths were local. A large part of our legislation pertains to localities whose needs are unknown to members of this body, with the exception of the one member who introduces the bill, and the general rule is to accept his endorsement. It seems to me that such measures would receive far more intelligent consideration in the boards of supervisors of the respective counties interested. There the decision would not rest upon one man, but upon a body of men who are especially qualified to pass upon the needs of their immediate localities. Our State Constitution provides in section 27 of article 3, that "The Legislature shall, by general laws, confer upon the boards of supervisors of the several counties of the State such further powers of local legislation and administration as the Legislature may, from time to time, deem expedient." It seems to me that such further powers referred to have not been conferred to the extent that they might be with great relief to the vast volume of business here, nor to the extent consistent with the best interests of the localities affected. I trust a law may be passed this year in pursuance of the section of the Constitution I have quoted, that will give more home rule to the counties through further powers of local legislation being conferred upon boards of supervisors.

I congratulate you and the people of the State that the constitutional amendment submitted to the action of the electors of the State at the last election, received a majority of the votes cast and is now a part of our supreme law. It cuts off all special legislation by private or local bill, to exempt property from taxation. General laws may be passed as before but there will be no favoritism hereafter. This amendment will not only reduce the volume of laws, but will protect the general body of taxpayers from injustice. Some religious organizations opposed the amendment, but it was through a misapprehension of its effect.

Measures for the improvement of our present tax system, which is frequently inequitable in its practical operation, should receive our most careful attention and consideration. In my closing address before the last Assembly I said upon this subject:

"The most important measure before us that failed of enactment, was the mortgage tax bill. The division of opinion on the measure indicated that the subject must be studied and there must be a season of education among the people to decide what they want. This much is certain: That the present law for the taxation of personal property is grossly unequal in its operation and miserably inefficient. Year by year the wealth of the State increases and the proportion of personal property on the tax rolls decreases. Worse than that, it is the widows and orphans and conscientious citizens whose mortgages get on the tax rolls, while wealthier people by various devices avoid such liability altogether. I believe that a uniform tax should be imposed, which can be collected alike from all. I trust that public sentiment may be so crystallized before another Legislature meets that a remedy will be found for the present unjust system, and a law promptly enacted in the interest of justice as between those who are and those who should be taxed for support of the government.

"Without going into details, I simply insist that all should be taxed or none, and the tax should not be left alone upon those least able to pay it. I would also suggest that a small tax that can be uniformly collected may yield more than a large tax that can be easily evaded. I trust that you will take this problem home with you and talk it over with your neighbors, and that those of you who return here next January will come prepared to give it a wise and just solution.

“The ideal tax system, in my view, will be one which shall compel every citizen and every corporation to contribute to the support of government and public improvements in exact proportion, as near as may be, to their ability to make such contribution.”

I trust that those who have been re-elected to this body have taken pains to ascertain and crystallize public sentiment upon this subject, and that we may have some practical improvement made. A light tax which bears upon all alike is in the interest of justice and will yield more revenue than the present law which imposes a heavy tax and collects it from comparatively few.

In Pennsylvania a tax of four mills is levied on money at interest, including mortgages, judgments, bonds, notes, etc. This tax is assessed by county officers, but three-fourths of the revenues derived from it are paid into the State treasury, and one-fourth goes into the treasury of the county where the tax is collected. This law has put upon the assessment rolls of the State of Pennsylvania valuations of money at interest amounting to about seven hundred millions of dollars. In our State the total amount of all kinds of personal property assessed is less than six hundred and fifty millions.

Upon the question of abolishing all direct State taxes we may be able to profit by the methods and experience of other States. Connecticut has accomplished the entire separation of State and local taxation. New Jersey levies a State tax sufficient to produce $5 for each child of school age, but 90 per cent. is returned to the county in which it is collected, so the amount distributed upon a different basis is not sufficient to cause strife in equalization between counties. Pennsylvania levies no State tax upon land, but raises all its State revenues from various forms of personal property taxation. Massachusetts has a mixed system, as we have a mixed system, but not exactly similar.

It is contended by some that a direct State tax is desirable in order to insure economy in appropriations, but I have never discovered that it accomplished that result. Strong public sentiment, a conscientious Legislature and a determined executive are far more efficient. Some of the most eminent political economists in our country advocate a complete separation of State and local taxation, on the ground that the State is too large a territory to equalize with justice a tax upon the various counties.

It is entirely feasible to abolish our State tax upon land, except the small amount required by the Constitution (section 4, article 7) to make payments on the canal debt, and I hope to see the abolition accomplished this year. There are plenty of burdens left for the land owners and home owners to bear, in the local taxes for improvements, schools, roads, bridges, poor funds, etc.

Notwithstanding the growth of our State in population and wealth, the annual appropriation for the support of the common schools has not been increased since 1890. That year it was raised a quarter of a million dollars, making three and one-half millions, and that amount has continued to be our annual appropriation for common schools ever since. During the eleven years that have elapsed since any increase in such annual appropriation has been made, the cities and large villages of the State have grown much more rapidly than the country, so their proportion of the public money has increased until the amount received by a rural district now is less than it was twenty years ago, when the State appropriation was three-fourths of a million less. This money is distributed by first giving $100 for every teacher employed. The high schools that are now found in every city and large town, require a larger number of teachers than ever before. The country school must have one teacher, although the attendance of pupils may have diminished, as is generally the case. The result is, less and less State money going to the smaller districts, while teachers' salaries have constantly advanced. Thus the burden upon the rural taxpayers increases every year, until many a farmer is paying a school tax that amounts to more than all his other taxes combined. It seems to me that the growth of the State demands a substantial increase in the common school appropriation, and the changed conditions as to the relative number of teachers employed give an added claim in behalf of the weaker districts.

During the past twenty years while our annual appropriation for common schools has been increased from two and three-fourths to three and one-half millions, our total annual State and local expenditures for all the schools have increased from ten millions to thirty-three millions. The annual aggregate has nearly doubled in the last ten years. Evidently there is more and more being spent upon the higher grades of education, and the common schools, the basis of the whole system, are not receiving their share of the increase.

We all believe in economy, but we would not mar the glorious record of New York State by diminishing State aid to common schools. Our State has the proud record of being the first of all the States to make an appropriation to support common schools for the education of all the people. Appropriations for this purpose should increase with the growth of the State, with especial aid to the interior districts, where expenses have increased, population has diminished, and the higher school tax falls upon those who toil hard for a limited income. They "build school houses and raise men" in those districts, and their patriotism and zeal for education, never fail.

Without detaining you longer from the work of completing your organization, allow me to again thank you for the distinguished honor you have conferred upon me, to renew my pledge of absolute fairness in administration, and to tender you my best efforts in co-operating with you to make this session pleasant for all, useful to the people of the State in practical reforms, and gratifying to all in the short period of time we shall occupy in completing our work.

Mr. Allds offered for the consideration of the House a resolution, in the words following:

Resolved, That the House do now adjourn as a testimonial of our respect and esteem to the memory of the late President William McKinley who was born fifty-nine years ago to-day.

Mr. Allds said: Fifty-nine years ago, on this day, occurred an event which at that time was unnoticed. It marked the commencement of a life which has occupied the central part of the national stage during these last years. I regard that it was extremely fitting, Mr. Speaker, that this Legislature should last week have made suitable arrangements which look toward a commemorative service over the memory of William McKinley. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I do not regard that at this time I ought to give utterance to words which naturally would be fit to this occasion. But it seemed, Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as throughout the length and breadth of the State of New York there are gathered in every schoolhouse our school children, to-day, engaged in exercises which remind them of the services rendered by our late lamented President, inasmuch as throughout the United States the day of his birth is to-day being commemorated, and that the Governor has issued a proclamation in this State, I did not regard that it would be fitting that we should close the morning's session without being mindful of the fact that this day did mark the birthday of William McKinley, and that when we separated this morning it should be by a rising vote of adjournment, as a testimonial of our respect and of our remembrance for that man who, starting from the common people, rose step by step, until, when, unfortunately, within this state, his life went out, he was beyond any question the best beloved citizen of this entire country, no matter what one's politics might be, no matter where one might live or dwell, for he was of the common people, a man throughout his entire career laboring for the common people, and when he did finally reach the presidential chair, a true American laboring for Americans, in such a way that he commanded the respect and compelled the respect for this country from all sister nations, the world around.

Mr. Palmer said: Mr. Speaker, a person who by an assassin's bullet has compassed the taking of an American life, whether he be a private citizen or a public personage, aims a blow not only to the heart of an individual citizen, but aims a deadly blow as well to the heart of our common and beloved country. And, sir, there comes a time in the history of nations and the history of men when the invisible line which seems to divide us—we call it sometimes politics and political thought—when that invisible line is entirely wiped out; and when an American citizen who loves his country and who loves his institutions, will rally to the support of its principle and to the support of those men who maintain those principles. And when a man dare stand out and direct a bullet to the head of our common country it brings us all together as common mourners around a common bier. This is where we stood a few months ago. This is where we stand to-day again, in memory, and this is where we will stand so long as any incident will occur during our memory and the memory of those who shall follow us, that shall bring us back to a time when the President of the United States, William McKinley, was shot dead at Buffalo by the hands of an assassin. I say this is a question, then that this is a question that appeals to the bosom of Americans; this is a question that appeals to our manhood; this is a question which appeals to our love, our sympathy; this is a question which not only enters the individual breast but appeals to the fireside and home of every one about this circle, and when we appeal to the home we appeal to the strength of our American institutions to-day. True it has been said that this man represents every citizen of our common country. He came through the walks known as the common walks of life; when danger was threatened he in connection with others stood at the battle front and bared his breast to danger, that our flag might still float and that our institutions might live, and after the test and when history was being written, history that we fondly love, this man emerged from the conflict and was chosen by a majority of the American people, whose homes, whose property interests he had so nobly protected upon the field of battle, and by choice was elected to be the chief officer of this country, which he had helped to save, and in this dignified position looking all along back through the pathway over which he has trod and seeing friends and neighbors all along that pathway, an assassin, a man who has no property stake in this country, a proletarian with no interest in common with ours, aimed a bullet not only at the heart of this distinguished citizens but at the heart of our common country, and assaulted our institutions; and to-day as legislators we are looking all over the land as best we can to exterminate that element from our midst. This representative who went down to death at the hands of our enemies, we should commemorate on every occasion that is befitting for such commemoration. I, therefore, Mr. Speaker, voicing my own sentiment, and I know I voice the sentiment of the minority around this circle, will second the resolution which has been offered. .

Mr. Speaker.—Gentlemen, you have heard the motion which has been so eloquently made by the gentleman from Chenango, and so emphatically endorsed by the gentleman from Schoharie, that now, as an evidence of the respect and esteem in which we hold the memory of the late lamented President, that this body do now adjourn, and that the vote upon that motion be taken by a rising vote.

Mr. Speaker put the question whether the House would agree to said resolution, and it was determined in the affirmative by a rising vote.

The expense of such publication shall be a county charge. Proof of due publication of such notice shall, within twenty days after the last publication, be made and filed and recorded in the office of the clerk of said county, who shall cause the same to be properly indexed. Until said notice of expiration of time to redeem shall have been published, as herein provided, the time to redeem shall not be deemed to have expired. No error or imperfection in said notice as published shall in any way affect the sufficiency or validity of such notice or that of any subsequent proceeding or conveyance based thereon. No other, further or different notice of the expiration of the time to redeem shall be required to be published, served upon or given to any person whatever. If such real estate sold for taxes, or any portion thereof, be not redeemed, as herein provided, the county treasurer shall execute to the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, a conveyance of the real estate so sold, and unredeemed, which shall vest in the grantee an absolute estate in fee, free from all liens, claims and encumbrances of every name and nature whatsoever, subject only to the right of redemption on the part of the holder of a mortgage, as provided herein, and such claims as the county may have thereon for taxes. Whereas, The Legislature of this great State ought to take action placing itself in line with the sentiment of the people and in a position of leadership in the accomplishment of a most desirable reform; and

Mr. Palmer offered for the consideration of the House a resolution, in the words following:

Whereas, The mortgage tax bill now pending before the Legislature, exempts mortgages from local taxation, upon condition of paying a State tax; and

Whereas, This measure is one of many, already enacted into law, or prospective, which has stripped localities of sources of taxation, until the burden of local taxation rests almost wholly upon real estate; and

Whereas, The State Board of Tax Commissioners, in a recent report, said that "the direct tax imposed by the State upon localities is, relatively speaking, an item of minor moment," of which "Greater New York pays 64 per cent. of the whole," so "that any remedial legislation failing to comprehend this local status must fall far short of ameliorating the condition of the real estate owner, or tenant," therefore be it

Resolved, That the Comptroller of the State of New York be and he is hereby requested to transmit to the Assembly all information which he may possess, tending to show whether it would not be possible to pay all expected appropriations for State purposes for the ensuing year out of revenues now in hand, or certain to accrue to the State treasury, without further encroachment upon local sources of taxation.

Whereas, The Lighthouse Board of the Treasury Department at Washington has ordered the discontinuance of the light in the hand of the bronze Goddess of Liberty on Bedloe's Island in the harbor of New York; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the people of the State of New York, through their representatives in the Assembly, respectfully petition the members of Congress from the State of New York to take such action as will result in the retention of said light; and be it further

Resolved, That the Clerk of this Assembly transmit to the several members of Congress from the State of New York a copy of these resolutions.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1902.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Prayer by Rev. A. H. Eaton.

On motion of Mr. Allds, the reading of the journal of yesterday was dispensed with and the same was approved.

Mr. McKeown.—I rise, Mr. Speaker, to a question of personal privilege. My attention has been called to an article which appeared in an afternoon local paper yesterday in connection with my objection as to discussing the resolution introduced by Mr. Palmer on Monday evening last. The article states that I had been opposed to the policy of the minority leader and to his resolution, and that my opposition represented others than myself. I desire to state, Mr. Speaker, that I am in perfect accord with the minority leader and his resolution and that which he intends to show by it. My opposition was based on my prerogative to discuss that resolution when I was prepared to discuss it.

I desire to state further, Mr. Speaker, that I individually regard the minority leader as one of the ablest leaders it has had during my eight years' service; and in this statement, Mr. Speaker, I voice the sentiments of the entire minority.

In connection with that distinguished ex-Senator and ex-Governor (connected with statements by the imagination of the reporter) I desire to say that I have the highest personal regard for him, and the organization that I have the privilege in part to represent regards the ex-Senator as the ablest man in this State in either party! And that organization hopes that in the near future, through him and his advice, the democracy of this State will be restored to supremacy.

The privileges of the floor were extended to Henry Buckner, a former member.
